NOT TO BE ENTIRELY EXEMPTED.

It is pleasing to note that the leader writer on the Oregonian who has charge of the field of legislative discussion is getting that paper out of its awkward attitude on the subject of repeal of the mortgage tax law, Sept. 15 he writes:

"The Salem JOURNAL is mistaken in supposing that anybody in Oregon is working for the entire exemption of mortgages from taxation.
That would be a good thing, perhaps, if all other evidences of credit were exempted from mortgages and taxation confined strictly to visible, actual, palpable property, fairly and honestly assessed. But nobody, so far as we know, proposes to go to that length now. What is desired is so to amend the law as to tax mortgages precisely like other personal property, as is done in all other states, where they are taxed at all; making the tax judgment, in case of default, a lien on any property of the owner of the mortgage in the county where it is recorded, not upon the real estate of the creditor wherever situated. What is desired, further, is the abolition of deduction from assessment for debts, or the limitation of such allowance to an offset for credits, as is done in every state where it is allowed at all; instead of allowing rich men to juggle away all their taxation by deductions for imaginary credits, as is done here. This, so far as we know, is all the reform anybody is working for in the Oregon taxation laws, though the system of assessments cries out for reform and the state is suffering for a supreme board of equalization with plenary powers. We don't see any working at cross purposes in this."

Unfortunately this writer suffers from a general impression that the paper he writes for has not always been so prone to battle for the cause of the poor man and against the rich man as it might have been.
But all are glad to see it getting right—or nearer right than it was.
